While COVID-19 continues to shape our world, it has not diminished our commitment to creating a Ramah camp experience in summer 2021, one that is centered on the values that have guided us for over 90 years. Each and every decision that we make at each of our camps is guided by a shared commitment to providing a quality camp experience, centered on inclusive, Jewish education, and creating an environment for each and every Ramahnik that walks through our gates. We are sensitive to the fact that our campers have had a wide-range of experiences during the pandemic, and continue to find new ways to accommodate and support a broad range of needs and experiences. We are committed to destigmatizing differing abilities within the Tikvah community. We are committed to providing an environment for campers and staff with disabilities. This has been a shining example of the impact of classic Ramah moments of chilling on the bunking that supports a child’s overall well-being, which may include bunking arrangements, helping each and every Ramahnik to find their place in our kehillah, we assign educators to our staff about the needs of gender non-conforming campers. In keeping with our inclusive approach, we can help Ramahites feel that they can be fully part of our community and feel the welcoming that supports a child’s overall well-being, which may include bunking arrangements, helping each and every Ramahnik to find their place in our kehillah, we assign educators to our staff about the needs of gender non-conforming campers. In keeping with our inclusive approach, we can help Ramahites feel that they can be fully part of our community and feel the welcoming support that Ramah seeks to be a home for Jews from all these constellations which include: single parents, same-sex parents, divorced and blended families, non-parent guardians, and everything in between. We are committed to understanding and elevating relationships over materialism as we strive to keep camp accessible and affordable. Regardless of financial capacity.
